A Break Up....A Serena and Darien Story Chp.1

A Break Up....Serena and Darien

> Prologue

"I can't see you anymore, Serena." Such simple words took the breath from her lips. Was her only love > ending the relationship that survived over several millenniums? It could not be true, and yet here he was, standing before her unwavering. No look of counterfeit on his face. "Why?" Such a simple question and >yet, there was no simple answer. "It doesn't matter why. This relationship ends today. Good-bye, Serena."

As he walked away, her life ended there. No tears forced their way down her cheeks.

There was no >feeling of hatred towards the man she called her lover. Looking down at her feet, she felt only emptiness.

>Chapter 1

Three years had passed since Darien's disappearance. No one knew where he had left to, not even his > best friends. As the years passed, everyone saw a gradual change in Serena. No longer was she a crybaby; no longer was she a glutton, no longer did she slack from her school work. Perhaps his departure > was for the better and maybe it wasn't. "Serena! Over here." In the cool shadows of the blossoming trees, several people were gathered for lunch. Forever by her side, the guardians of the moon princess crossed >time and space to be with their friend and mistress. She couldn't live with them nor could she live without them. "Man, Serena! You always used to be the first to our lunch spot and now look!" Raye Hino shook > her head in mock dismay. "Who would have thought that our Serena would stay indoors to help teachers before having her lunch." "Oh come off it, Raye. It's not like it's anything unusual. Serena has finally >grown up into a responsible young woman. Now if only you would take her exampleâ€| " chided Lita Kino. Raye crossed her arms with a look of conceit. As soon as Serena sat down, three other people > joined their lunch party. Seiya, Taiki, and Yaten Kou took their places next to their respective girlfriends.

 Life was finally normal. No more monster fights in the middle of something important. Everyone could >finally live his own life in peace.

>The time came for their graduation. Twelve years of childhood gone by, and not one was happy about it.
Where had the time flown? It felt as if only yesterday they had met and now they had to separate to go >their own separate ways. Amy was leaving Japan for the States where she could further develop her medical knowledge; Raye was going to take over her grandfather's temple; Lita was leaving for Europe > to take up gourmet cooking; Mina was making it big in the fashion industry; and Serena was staying in good old Japan studying as a manga artist. "Well, I guess it's good-bye for a while. We'll meet up again >for Christmas definitely though! And we all have one another's email address, right? Good. So I guess all we have now to do is party!!!!!" Everyone cheered as they partook in the farewell party.

Five years later Serena had finally graduated from her university and moved back to Tokyo to take up as > a manga artist. As she walked down the streets of her old home, she smiled with childish glee.
Instinctively she stopped before her old hang out, the arcade. Walking through the automatic doors, she > thought about how surprised Andrew would be to see her. However, he wouldn't be the only one. As she approached the counter, a familiar head of ebony hair caught her eye. A tense feeling overtook her >stomach as she got closer and closer to the counter. Someone was talking to Andrew, but who was it?

Andrew caught sight of Serena and waved her over. "Serena, over here!" As Andrew called out her > name, the man turned around to meet her. Darien and Serena stood before each other with equal shock on their faces. Before anyone could blink an eye, Serena's hand reached up and slapped his cheek. She >hurried out of the arcade.
